

HOMESCHOOL TEACHER COURSE

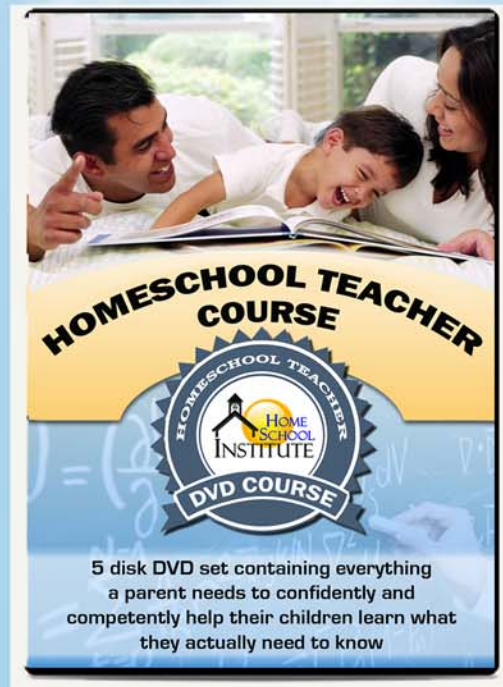

A full 10 hours of instruction on a 5 Disc DVD Set

The fact is that virtually every parent is more than qualified to teach their children and they require no credentials whatsoever. Parents are the best possible teachers for their children but some parents have indicated that they would feel more comfortable, if they knew a little more about what being a homeschool teacher really meant and what it included. So, the Home School Institute (HSI) is offering this course as a resource tool that provides valuable information about how children learn, what is really important and where to get help, for starters.

This DVD set contains hundreds of video clips, extracted from presentations that were given by some of the world's foremost experts on education and homeschooling,

Although the source videos can be found for free on the internet, the HSI gives value to this course by having sorted through hundreds of hours of presentations and by selected only the best parts of those videos that directly answer the most important questions that homeschool teachers have. Additional new information was then interjected around the clips to make it all make sense and to fill in any gaps.

This course provides parents with exactly what is needed to develop the right mind-set, including specifically the confidence, to be able to help their children teach themselves from birth through college and beyond.
